if you follow the crowd-providing the crowd is of the right sort. I have reasons to be proud of my customers. They are people of good taste and experience enough to know what the best is and insist on having it. They patronize me, going out of their way in many cases to do so, because that my claims of fine diamonds and highclass fewelry are based upon a foundation of exact truth. And what is more, they find the right kind of goods without the usual accompaniment of high prices. If you are not one of my customers you ought to be, in your own interest.

Ballot Boxes and Supplies to Be Distributed Through the Wards 10-Morrow.

"Our work here is finished; we are all ready for the primarles," said Chairman Logsdon, in his room at the headquarters of the Republican city committee in the Law building yesterday afternoon.

In an outer room the ballot boxes to be used at the primaries to be held next Tuesday to nominate a Republican city ticket are piled against the walls. They will be distributed to specified places in the wards to-morrow, and to-morrow night they will be issued to the inspectors of the precincts. The lids of the boxes are only tacked on, and in them are the voting supplies-pens, ink, a blue pencil, ballots, tally sheets and blank forms for affidavits. The precinct officials will furnish the tables at which they are to sit and receive the ballots, and on which the ballots will be marked by the voters. The boxes are not | to discuss the verses one by one. to be returned to the committee's headquarters after the primaries, for the reason that it will be cheaper to have new boxes made for the next occasion than to pay for wagons to haul the boxes back to head-

Persons approaching the grove early last night heard three squares away the singing | Inspectors Want Four Days' Pay and of the Pentecosters, a low but penetrating harmony, and as they came nearer the fervent ejaculations of half-formed words became audible. The members of the bands sat on chairs on the platform or upon crude benches under the tent. Most of the "workers" on the platform were men, clad in black, but the assemblage on the benches was composed of more women than men. The young people formed the outer edge of the crowd, and the children played upon the vacant benches.

The Rev. Mr. Nelson, well known in this city as the leader of the Pentecost Bands, opened the meeting with prayer. His words were accompanied by a hum from his hearers, a persistent sound, broken now and again by a shouted "Amen!" or a highvoiced woman's "Bless the Lord!" Mr. Nelson encouraged the enthusiasm of his people by pounding on the chair by the side of which he knelt.

The runaway horse was apparently blind to obstacles and ran hard against Keen's horse. One of the buggy shatts struck Keen's horse in the neck with such force that it tore through the flesh and protruded from the opposite side. The strength of several men was necessary to pull the shaft from the neck of the injured horse, and it was not done for some minutes, during which the agonizing groans of the animal, which seemed to be choking, caused many of the spectators, tender of heart, to turn away. The injured horse was taken to W. B. Craig, a veterinary surgeon, who said it would recover. A peculiar thing about the injury was that little blood came from the wound.
